JERZY K. KOS (University of Wrocław) / Friedrich Gilly's outstanding work awaits to be restored. The Mausoleum of the von Hoym Family in Brzeg Dolny

This article presents the last surviving work of the Berlin architect Friedrich Gilly (1772–1800) – the Mausoleum of the Von Hoym Family, located in the palace park in Brzeg Dolny (Dyhernfurth) in Silesia. The building was constructed in 1800–1802 in the form of a four-column Doric prostyle temple of sandstone blocks, in accordance with the principles of ancient Greek architecture. Its very poor state of preservation requires the intervention of a preservationist. Undertaking restoration efforts is currently hampered by the ownership rights of the ruin. This article aims to draw attention to this problem.
